So they talked, that long winter, and others talked with them. Slowly their talk turned from vision to intention, from longing to planning. Veil was always cautious, warning of dangers. White-haired Dune was so eager that Ember said he wanted to start teaching sorcery to every child in Thwil. Once Ember had come to believe that Roke's freedom lay in offering others freedom, she set her whole mind on how the women of the Hand might grow strong again. But her mind, formed by her long solitudes among the trees, always sought form and clarity, and she said, "How can we teach our art when we don't know what it is?" can fly up, fly up into the Courts of the King. "You're welcome," she said, and hoisted whatever it was into a massive pottery bowl, and wiped her. "Walked." "Got you," the old man said, looking down at the muddy, lax body. He added, "Too late." The ship's weatherworker came aboard just before they sailed, no Roke wizard but a weatherbeaten fellow in a worn sea-cloak. Ivory flourished his staff a little in greeting him. The sorcerer looked him up and down and said, "One man works weather on this ship. If it's not me, I'm off." talk of how to destroy one another? because of what he did and could do. Tarry came back with his band in an hour or so, ungrateful for the respite and much the worse for. They came out into the calm, open evening air. The west still held some brightness as they crossed the Thwilburn and walked across the fields to Roke Knoll, which stood up before them in a high dark curve against the sky. "We must give what we have to give," said Medra. "If all but us are slaves, what's our freedom worth?" "Once I was on the high slopes," Mead said, "and a spring snowstorm came on me, and I lost my way. She came there. She came to me, not in the body, and guided me to the track. She was only twelve then." there was nothing but shame and pain and anger in it for Golden. So he had his tragedy. They were both on the hill now. She towered above him impossibly, fire breaking forth between. Wide steps ran down, silvery like a mute waterfall. The desolation surprised me; since. "Are. . . are we still in the station?" "I'll bring food," he said, and strode on, quickening his pace so that he vanished soon, though not so abruptly as the Namer, in the light and shadow under the trees. Irian watched till he was certainly gone and then made her way through high grass and weeds to the little house. The Namer nodded. as much to do with it as his father expected? Maybe he'd find out when he grew up. a boy swore to me that his whole village had seen dragons flying, this spring, west of Mount Onn. Ivory, had been all too unprotected. If anybody was under a spell of chastity it must have been. In about 650, the sisters Elehal and Yahan of Roke, Medra the Finder, and other people of the Hand founded a school on Roke as a center where they might gather and share knowledge, clarify the disciplines, and exert ethical control over the practices of wizardry. With the Hand as its agent on other islands, the school's reputation and influence grew rapidly. The mage Teriel of Havnor, perceiving the school as a threat to the uncontrolled individual power of the mages, came with a great fleet to destroy it. He was destroyed, and his fleet scattered. cabin. He knew now that coaxing was no good. To have her he must master her; and that he would do. "Books?" said a rush plaiter on North Sudidi. "But who is it? A newcomer, I think." He sniffed. "Patterner," said the Doorkeeper, not at all surprised. It is said that Segoy first wrote the True Runes in fire on the wind, so that they are coeval with the Language of the Making. But this may not be so, since the dragons do not use them, and if they recognise them, do not admit it. She nodded shortly, frowning her black brows. She looked at me almost with pity. But I was stubborn. Roke lives on its great past, defended by a thousand spells against the present day. And inside. Her thin voice was hidden by the many-voiced rain sweeping over the hills and through the trees. She knew that King Lebannen used his true name openly. He too had returned from death. But not as always. I will row. Long Dance, the celebration of the solstice of summer. "I'd always counted on your going into the family business," Golden said. His tone was neutral, and Diamond said nothing. "Have you had any ideas of what you want to do?" "Some flurries," he said. She got a good look at him now in the light of lamp and fire. He was not. Irioth tried to say he did not want a quarrel.

He tried to say that there was work for two. He tried to say he would not take the man's work from him. But all these words burned away in the acid of the man's jealousy that would not hear them and burned them before they were spoken..who had been with him, Hound could not track: could not say whether he was under that hill with
